PART 1

The 5-part formula

The difference between a generic text and one that is ready to use is almost always the prompt. Include these five parts:

Role	You are a real estate copywriter specialized in the Riviera Maya.
Context	85 m² condo in Puerto Aventuras, marina view, 2 bedrooms, USD 195,000.
Task	Write 3 versions: for a listing portal, for Instagram and for an investor.
Format	80 words maximum each, in Spanish and English.
Constraints	No empty adjectives like "amazing". Use facts, not flattery.

Then iterate

The first answer is a draft. Try:

Adjust

"Make it shorter and warmer."

Compare

"Give me 3 versions with different tones."

Let it ask

"Before writing, ask me any questions you need."

Ask for a critique

"Critique your own answer: what sounds generic or is missing?"

Teach it your voice

PROMPT

"Here are three descriptions I wrote. Describe my style in 5 points. Then write the description for this new property in that same style."

Tip: save those style rules in a Claude Project so you do not have to repeat them every time.

Ready-to-copy prompts

Replace the bracketed details with your client or property.

Listings

ONE LISTING, THREE TEXTS

"Here are the details and photos of [property]. Write a portal description (80 words), an Instagram post with 5 hashtags and a short email for an investor. In Spanish and English, no empty adjectives."

Clients

PRICE OBJECTION

"The client saw a similar condo for less in another area. Give me 2 ways to respond with appreciation arguments, without sounding defensive."

COUNTEROFFER

"The buyer offered [X]% less. Help me write a reply that holds the value without closing the door to negotiation."

From lead to signing

FIRST CONTACT

"Reply to this message from a lead interested in [property type] in [area] under [budget]. Include 2 questions to qualify them."

RE-ENGAGEMENT

"They did not reply in 3 days. Write a short email with a concrete reason to respond today."

CLOSING

"Generate the welcome letter and the document checklist for the signing."

Analysis and files

COMPARABLES

"I am attaching an Excel with [N] recent sales in the area. Calculate the price per m², the average and the median, flag outliers and suggest a price range with your reasoning. Give me a table and 3 conclusions to explain to the seller."

CONTRACT

"Here is the reservation contract. Summarize in a table the parties, amounts, deadlines and penalty clauses. Flag what a lawyer should review."

Content, presentations and cautions

BLOG CONTENT

"Outline an article about [topic] for [audience]. Hook, 3 sections and a call to action."

LISTING PRESENTATION

"With this data and these photos, build a 9-slide presentation for the seller: summary, gallery, location, comparables and pricing strategy. Make it in Spanish and English."

STANDING INSTRUCTION FOR A PROJECT

"Reply in the client's language. Friendly, professional tone. Never invent prices or square meters: if a detail is missing, ask me."

Do

- Verify figures, addresses and legal details
- Use Claude for the first draft
- Give it context and examples of your style

Avoid

- Sharing sensitive client data
- Treating its answer as legal or tax advice
- Publishing without human review

Privacy: the quick rule

Ask yourself: would I put this in an email to a stranger? If not, do not paste it. Never share passwords, card or account numbers, or official IDs.

Your checklist for this week

- 1 Pick a repetitive task. A listing sheet, a follow-up email or a post.
- 2 Write it with the 5 parts. Role, context, task, format and constraints.
- 3 Create your first Project with your tone and a reference file.
- 4 Measure the result. Time how long it takes with Claude and without it.
